Aquaculture is the fastest-growing food-producing sector in the world and the Asia-Pacific region has dominated global aquaculture production, both in quantity and value. In order to stay current with aquatic animal health research, Dr. Chen I-Wen was dispatched to the '18th Meeting of the Asia Regional Advisory Group on Aquatic Animal Health' held by the Network of Aquaculture Centres in Asia-Pacific (NACA) and the 1st Meeting of the ad hoc Steering Committee of the Regional Collaboration Framework on Aquatic Animal Health in Asia and the Pacific' held by the OIE in Bangkok, Thailand from November 18-21, 2018. The first two days of the meeting mainly involved discussions on regional aquatic animal health and the current threat of emerging diseases. The last two days of the meeting dealt with the establishment of a regional collaboration framework. The main topics of discussion included the key work topics for this cooperation framework, the members to be included, and the proposed activities for each topic. Through the meetings, we were able to ascertain the aquatic animal health status of other countries in the region, to express our vision and needs for global emerging aquatic diseases, and improve infection prevention measures.
