Abstract

A researcher of Animal Health Research Institute was invited to attend the International Visitor Leadership Program (IVLP) entitled “Global Health Challenges and Security” in the United States from June 9 to 31, 2022. The IVLP is the premier professional exchange program established and coordinated by the U.S. Department of State. IVLP is an exchange program that aims to deepen the relationship between other countries and the United States through professional and cultural exchanges via short-term visits of foreign researchers or students to the United States. In this IVLP, the theme was “Global Health Challenges and Security”, and the Taiwanese participants communicated with experts and official personnel active in the public health, and agricultural sectors, as well as researchers at universities and research institutes via physical and online meetings and visits. Through this program, the Taiwanese participants gained a more comprehensive understanding of how the U.S. works to attain the goals of “One Health” and “Global Health” through multisectoral partnerships across public, private, and nonprofit sectors.
